

In this respect the articles of the official British journalists, Augur in the October number of the "Fortnightly Review" and Paulson Newman in the October number of the "Nineteenth Century", are exceedingly characteristic.

The notorious official journalist of the British Foreign Office, who writes under the nom de plume of "Augur", declares that for Italy "the greatest question is the question of the 'surplus population'" and it is inevitable that the "eyes of the Italians are directed to the waste territories in Asia Minor where a government, absolutely lacking in culture, has converted a fertile country into a wilderness". He further develops the idea that the Dodecanese Islands are for the Italians a splendid jumping-off ground into Asia Minor" and that this cannot be prevented.

Paulson Newman develops this theme further and points out that the only possibility for Turkey to secure guarantees against the Italian danger, exists in an understanding with Great Britain and the abandonment of an independent national policy. He declares straightforwardly that Turkey is incapable of remaining completely independent without some sort of foreign influence. She must submit to the leadership of the West, otherwise she will find one fine day that she has lost her territories.

Newman writes further as follows:

"Obviously the only means which Turkey has in order to save herself from this danger, is gradually to change her policy in such a manner that it permits the European elements which are friendly disposed towards her to guide her. At the present time, when relations between Great Britain and Turkey are satisfactory, there are obviously no obstacles to the bringing about of a final accomplishment between both countries in the interests of both Parties."

As far as Turkey is concerned so far an approachment would doubly secure the position of Turkey, on one hand it would promote the commercial prosperity of the country and on the other hand it would preserve Turkey from aggressive actions from outside. With regard to Great Britain, this approachment would render easier our foreign policy towards Russia and Persia, it would lighten the tasks of our Mandate in Iraq, it would strengthen the connecting routes of the British Empire with India and relieve the saturation in Egypt because the Turkish elements in the population of Egypt, who in many respects exercise the greatest influence in the carrying out of our Egyptian Policy, would come over to our side."

In the last sentence there sets forth in the most obvious manner the aggressive intentions of British policy towards the Soviet Union and the Near East, the realisation of which policy is hindered by the independent peaceful policy of Turkey and of the Soviet Union.

But all this would be "terrible" to the Dutch imperialists, of extent only a pleasant dream. They are planning to make out. The policy of peace not only expresses the interests of the peoples of the Soviet Union or of the vanquished peoples of Central Europe, but also those of the peoples of the East who are striving to build up a new life. This same policy also corresponds to the wishes of the broad masses of the population of the imperialist States themselves. The antagonistic interests between these States which exist in spite of all possible blocs, hinder them in their intentions to penetrate by means of violence at least into Asia Minor.

The policy of the Western States knows only one language when dealing with the East — the language of threats. But just as Turkey of the year 1920, which has experienced every hardship, the fight for independence is not the Ottoman Empire, and it is no longer possible to speak to her in the language of threats, even if these threats are sweetened by promises of advantages. This will scarcely lead to that object to which the policy of the Western States is directed, but to the opposite.

THE REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT IN THE COUNTRIES OF THE EAST

Manifesto of the E. C. C. I. on the Insurrection in Indonesia.

Moscow, November 21st, 1920

The E. C. C. I. in its session of November 20th adopted the following manifesto to the workers and oppressed peoples of the world concerning the insurrection in Indonesia:

The revolution against imperialism is spreading from one country to the other. From China it has spread to Java where the suppressed and exploited masses have risen against Dutch imperialism. An armed insurrection has broken out in the western sections of the island of Java. Military have been mobilised to suppress the insurrection. According to reports hundreds have been killed and mass arrests have taken place. The Dutch General Gouverneur has expressed his intention of crushing the insurrection mercilessly.

The struggle for freedom is nothing new in the Dutch colonies. The population has never completely submitted to imperial dominance. From time to time insurrections have taken place and been brutally suppressed. Only recently, however have the struggles for the revolution taken on an organised form under the leadership of the Communist Party. A united front under the hegemony of the proletariat has been set up to free the country from imperialist domination.

This united revolutionary army represents the overwhelming majority of the population, the proletariat, the peasantry, the intellectuals and the petty bourgeoisie. From aggressive actions from outside. With regard to Great Britain, this approachment would render easier our foreign policy towards Russia and Persia, it would lighten the tasks of our Mandate in Iraq, it would strengthen the connecting routes of the British Empire with India and relieve the saturation in Egypt because the Turkish elements in the population of Egypt, who in many respects exercise the greatest influence in the carrying out of our Egyptian Policy, would come over to our side."

Nevertheless, the growing revolutionary flood could not be dammed. The will to freedom no longer permits itself to be defeated. The population of Indonesia must rise again against the intolerable conditions imposed upon it by Dutch imperialism.

The population has been robbed of its elementary political rights. It is loaded with ever growing taxes, the peasantry is exploited by large landowners and planters. The wages of industrial workers are hunger wages. The freedom of organisation, the freedom of the press, the freedom of meeting, an-

522560 in en Indonesia

The people of Indonesia is rising against these inhuman intolerable conditions. Dutch imperialism, armed to the teeth, would drown this movement for freedom in an ocean of blood unless the revolutionary movement of Indonesia was enthusiastically and energetically supported by the workers and by the subversives and revolutionaries of the whole world. The Communist International welcomes the revolutionary struggle of the people of Indonesia and pledges its complete support.

Workers of the world! Do not permit the Dutch imperialists to drown the struggle for freedom of Indonesia in blood! Hasten to the aid of the Indonesian fighters! Organise mass meetings, express your sympathy for the insurrection in Java and protest against imperialist terror! Organise demonstrations before the Dutch Embassies and Consulates and demand freedom for the Indonesian people and the military evacuation of the colony.

Suppressed peoples of the world! The insurgents in Indonesia are your advance guard, they express the will to freedom which is your common property. Do everything in your power to support them in their struggle for independence.

Down with imperialism! Long live the united anti-imperialist fronts of the workers and the oppressed peoples of the world! Long live the free people of Indonesia!

The Insurrection in Java.

By Gerard Vautier (Amsterdam).

Events in West Java, where an insurrection against the rule of terror of the Dutch imperialists on an unprecedented scale has broken out in the immediate vicinity of Batavia, the capital of the island, has thoroughly frightened the Dutch bourgeoisie. The insurrection was directly provoked by the Government measures which were opposed to the interests of the masses of Javanese workers. In the last few years, the working masses in Java have been deprived of all political rights. Taxes increased into they became intolerable, "justice" became a special apparatus to be used against those who in any way instigated resistance to the white executioners. Coolies were beaten to death, leaders of the workers were dragged out of meetings and thrown into the prisons, which are overcrowded throughout whole Java and where the prisoners are terribly tortured. The case of Comrade Sugono, a faithful pioneer, who is said to have taken his own life in prison, called forth the greatest indignation amongst the Javanese workers and peasants. The "Sil Po", a Chinese daily paper in Java is already speaking of a second Sugono case. About a month ago, 900 Communists were arrested all at once in West Java, all of them leaders and trusted members of the movement. The Press of the Dutch ruling class in Java has during the last week announced fresh arrests daily. It was inevitable that an explosion should finally occur.

At the moment, when the "elite" of the Europeans were assembled at an brilliant ball in the palace of the new Governor General, dancing on a volcano, an attack was made on the prisons where the leaders of the people's movement were tortured, and at the same time a division of insurgents, clad in white (in this way they demonstrated that they were dedicated to death) marched to the barracks of the military police, for whom the population cherishes a deadly hatred. A telephone exchange was occupied, railway lines torn up, trains held up. There were conflicts with the police troops in which blood was shed.

The Dutch bourgeois Press is demanding cruel and ruthless investigations. Why judicial prosecution? Short work should be made with the mutineers, they should be stood up against the wall straight away — demands the organ of the Amsterdam Exchange "Algemeen Handelsblad" which sharply criticised the Government troops because they were said not to have proceeded severely enough. We should realize that it is much better that the Javanese should hate us than for us to hate them. That they should love us. These口号 show that the Government will further intensify its reactionary measures. But will that help? The "Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant" answers this question by giving expression to its disappointment. For weeks it triumphantly announced that the natives in West Java were handing in their cards of membership of the P. C. I. (Perserikatan Komunis India) by hundreds — but they have remained Communists complains the "Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant", a great capitalist paper in right. The movement for freedom in Indonesia under the leadership of the Communist party can no longer be arrested. It is now even too late for another, so-called "moral" policy. The oppressors have chosen the wrong path.

These are not definite terms from the owners to the miners. The owners have consistently refused to meet the Miners' Federation. would come when, in similar cases, if the soldiers were told to fire on their brothers, they would no longer fire at the stars in the sky but at the stars on the collars of the officers.

The Communist Party of Holland and the revolutionary Trade Union Centre (N. A. S.) are preparing a vast campaign of agitation in which Javanese comrades will join. The organisations mentioned have already issued a manifesto on the events in Java.

THE MINERS' STRUGGLE IN ENGLAND

By R. Palmer Duff (London).

The decision of the Miners' Delegate Conference on November 13, to recommend acceptance of the Government's terms is a heavy blow to the working class. This decision is the immediate outcome of the fortnight's secret intrigues and behind-the-scenes negotiations of the General Council's strikebreaker "Negotiating Committee" which has thus completed its work of May 12. On the vote of the districts now comes the immediate future of the miners' struggle. Strong opposition to the terms is certain, although the result of the vote is not yet known.

The Government terms which are being voted on are an industrial Versailles. They demand surrender by the miners on every point — wages, hours and district agreements as well as a number of other points. The principal points of the terms are as follows:

1. District Negotiations and agreements.

2. Longer Hours to be settled by the districts.

3. Lower Wages down to 1921 level of 20 per cent above pre-war.

4. Profit increase in proportion of proceeds from 13 per cent up to 15 per cent.

5. District Boards with independent Chairman.

6. Agreements binding for at least three years.

A National Tribunal for the months November, December, January, February, March and April.

7. Agreements binding on the districts.

These are not definite terms from the owners to the miners.

The owners have consistently refused to meet the Miners' Federation. They are simply a "Memorandum" from the Government of suggested terms which might be embodied in the district agreements. The owners have conceded nothing and retain full freedom of action. The terms are thus in fact simply a document.

These are not definite terms from the owners to the miners.

The owners have consistently refused to meet the Miners' Federation. They are simply a "Memorandum" from the Government of suggested terms which might be embodied in the district agreements. The owners have conceded nothing and retain full freedom of action. The terms are thus in fact simply a document.

What do these terms mean?

First, the Miners' Federation is entirely eliminated.

There is no question of any national agreement. The Miners' Federation is to have no part in the negotiations.

Second, Longer Hours and lower Wages are conceded.

It is specifically laid down that the National Tribunal will receive no appeal unless longer hours are worked. Wages at 20 per cent above pre-war, with the official cost of living figure at 72 per cent above pre-war, means a drop in the real wage of over 30 per cent below the very low pre-war figure.

For this reason the Dutch bourgeois Press unanimously demands the blood of the rebels. For this reason reaction in Holland also demands that a fight be carried on against the C.P. of Holland. A few months ago the soldiers in the autumn manoeuvres, there were machine guns among the soldiers in some Dutch garrisons. When there was firing with bullets and a non-commissioned officer was killed. Special copies of a leaflet from the C.P. of Holland, the central organ of the C.P. of Holland were found in the barracks and condemned. The Ministry of War cited the circumstances as sufficient for representing the death of the non-commissioned officer as the consequence of a communist plot. The commanding general, Major de Visser, was openly accused of murder in the Second Chamber. He was prosecuted because, at an open meeting of soldiers in Amsterdam in the Hague, he gave expression to the opinion that a time when the miners had to work 16 hours a day, it would be

7. Compulsory Arbitration is to be established. District Agreements are to be made binding for at least three years.

(The attempt will be made to make this longer) during which all questions can only be referred to District Boards with independent Chairmen.

8. Board of Grievances against victimisation. This and two other demands are to be included in the new contract.

9. Since the above was written the results of the Miners' vote on the Governmental proposals have come to hand. These show a majority of 47,000 for rejection of the proposals.

With this the miners' strike is still to follow in London.

was asked for in vain. No militant workers may be expected to be taken on again, or to end the strike with the help of the Left Wing. In practice the terms will mean the dismissal of 200,000 miners. The effect of the increased hours was estimated by the Coal Commission to involve the dismissal of 130,000 miners! The closing down of less profitable pits and economies of working is expected to raise this number to 200,000 or even 250,000.

What led the Delegate Conference to recommend the acceptance of these terms which were violently opposed by the whole Left Wing and also by Cook? Undoubtedly the immediate cause of this reversal was the complete failure to carry out the decisions of the October Delegate Conference to intensify the struggle. These decisions were a strong lead to carry forward the fight by the demand for the embargo and the levy and by the withdrawal of the safety men. The fact of these decisions, which were a victory of the Left Wing, led to an immediate rallying of the whole front. 20,000 men who had gone back to work came out. But no serious attempt was made to carry out the policy.

The Miners' Executive delayed the embargo and the levy in friendly agreement with the General Council; the carrying out of the safety men was publicly opposed by Cook, even after the Conference decision, and was not attempted. The Trade Union Conference of November 3 was a useless sham, which voted a voluntary levy. In return for this the Miners' Executive handed themselves over to the General Council who conducted interminable secret negotiations with the Government and the Miners' leaders in order to draw the latter into surrender. These secret negotiations were extremely demoralising in their effect and the returns to work rapidly increased, although 75 per cent of the section of your own leaders could force you to break off your heroic struggle. After almost seven months of this struggle the Delegates Conference which met on November 4 and continued with adjournments till November 15 was visible. Even so the recommendation for acceptance was only carried by 432,000 to 352,000.

The Left Wing secured the reference of the terms to the districts. The rejection of the proposals at the Delegate Conference was voted for not only by the Left Wing (South Wales, Yorkshire, Forest of Dean), but also by certain right wing elections i.e. the Midlands districts with strong breakaway tendencies (Notts, Derbyshire, Leicestershire), voted by Varley who manifestly sought a complete district basis with no appearance even of a Federation agreement to submit to the General Council.

The Communist Party and Left Wing are conducting an intense campaign against acceptance. This campaign is justified both by the character of the terms and by the situation. The economic pressure of the stoppage on British Capitalism is now at its most intense, as is revealed both by the actual facts, and by the statements of leading industrialists and government representatives and the violent attacks of Government Ministers such as Birkehead on the miners' leaders, the prosecution even of La boult and the sentencing of miners now for the base offence of striking against the miners' leaders, the abandonment of the miners' leaders and the sentencing of miners now for the base offence of striking against the miners' leaders, the abandonment of the miners' leaders and the abandonment of

The Recently Attempted Putsch of the Catalonian Separatists.

By J. ar (Madrid).

During the last twelve months Primo de Rivera's government has been compelled to deal with several serious conspiracies against the dictatorship. On the 1st November last the "Journal Official" published a list of army officers who were to be exiled in the Canary Islands on account of their having taken part in preparing a military plot which had been discovered by the police some days previously. On the 5th November the Government was obliged to issue a "Communiqué" explaining the incidents that had occurred on the Franco-Spanish frontier.

Since the commencement of the present century a very strong movement for autonomy has existed in Catalonia, the inhabitants of which speak a language differing somewhat from actual Spanish and which is also spoken in the extreme southern parts of France. This autonomous movement, which is very popular among the masses of Catalonia, was headed at first by the big commercial bourgeoisie of Barcelona. It assumed the definite character of an economic struggle against the taxes imposed by the central government in Madrid. The Liga Regionalists (Regionalist Party) only defended the class interests of the bourgeoisie, its leaders being only actuated by the motives of political careerism.

In the year 1918, however, the feelings of the Spanish Catalonians underwent a change as a result of the appointment of Francisco Cambó, the leader of the Regionalist Party, as a minister of the crown.

The separatist masses who really desired autonomy came to realise that their leaders were only politicians, ready to accomodate themselves to Madrid at any moment. At the same time there developed a pure separatist movement which had not been able to find expression before owing to the syndicalist movement which was very strong throughout all Catalonia during these years.

When Primo de Rivera seized power in 1923, the separatist movement and the separatist propaganda were already strong and powerful. Primo de Rivera stated at that time that one of his reasons for establishing the dictatorship was to settle with the Catalonian separatists.

Right from the first days of the government of Primo de Rivera there set in a cruel repression of the separatists on the one hand and the Communists on the other. The persecution against the Catalonians was equally severe as that against the Communists. The police closed off their club premises, prohibited the Catalonian language being spoken in public, forbade the wearing of Catalonian emblems and badges, the hoisting of the catalonian flag etc. And in order to have a pretext for continuing the persecution, the police framed up a "conspiracy" against King Alfonso, for which three Separatists, each of them eighteen years of age, were condemned to imprisonment for life.

Primo de Rivera imagined that these repressions would kill the Separatist movement. The result proved the direct contrary. The Separatist movement is now stronger than ever. Even the priests in the pulpits defied the government decree by praying in the Catalonian language. In order to prevent this Primo de Rivera, through the mediation of Marqués de Magaz, sought to induce the Pope to forbid the priests to speak or pray in the churches in the Catalonian language. Primo de Rivera's fear of the Catalonian movement of the business people and industrialists was, however, exaggerated; the real danger lay in the peasant masses, in the masses of workers and the middle class whose feelings were stronger and more revolutionary.

There are three tendencies in the Catalonian movement: the Liga Regionalista, the Acció Catalana and L'Estat Català. The Liga Regionalista is supported by the big business bourgeoisie, which has no sincere desire for complete independence. The Acció Catalana represents the separatist intellectuals. L'Estat Català headed by Francisco Macia is the only tendency which really stands for separatist actions. The militant members of this Party have had to suffer every kind of persecution. In order to escape this many of them crossed the French frontier and settled down in Perpignan and other Catalonian cities in France. Here they initiated an intensive propaganda and organised their forces. For more than two years Perpignan has been the headquarters of the Catalonian separatists, and from there has been led by Francisco Macia.

Immediately after Primo de Rivera's coup d'état in 1923 the Communist Party intended to set up a Committee of Action against the dictatorship. This Committee was to have consisted of representatives of the Separatists, the Anarcho-Syndicalists and of the Communist Party. The Spanish Communist Party and also the Communist International considered the demands of the Catalonians to be justified and were prepared to support them. Right from the commencement, however, a profound antagonism separated the Communists from the Anarcho-Syndicalists and the Separatists. The latter two groups regard the struggle against the dictatorship purely as a question of a putsch. Against these putschist conceptions our Party advocated the necessity of organising a big revolutionary movement against the dictatorship. This movement would have had to lead all the working and peasant masses of the whole of Spain into the struggle. As a result of these tactical differences the Committee of Action came to nothing.

The results of the putschist tactics have demonstrated the futility of such a policy. The conspiracies organised in France which were always known beforehand by the police, thanks to the numerous agents provocateurs working in France in the service of the Spanish Embassy, have proved a failure. The Putsch of Vera (Franco-Spanish frontier) organised by the anarchists some time ago, only resulted in some of their number being killed, all to no purpose.

The putsch recently organised by the Separatists in Perpignan which was discovered by the French police, was a more serious affair and might have led to great disturbances in the country. But even then it would have been a failure.

The arrest of Ricciotti Garibaldi which led to the exposure of the trickery of the Italian police, has resulted in the expulsion of Italian refugee workers living in France. The Spanish police have been working for similar ends. Just recently Signor Cueto Captain of the Carabinieri, serving on the Franco-Spanish frontier, published a secret Manifesto in which he exposes the methods of the police. One night while he was on duty he heard shots coming from the direction of a nearby French village. On going to investigate the matter he came upon some men whom he arrested without knowing that they were police led by Louis Fenoll, Chief of the Madrid Police Service. Fenoll explained to Cueto that the matter was an affair of "high politics" in which he (Cueto) must not interfere. Fenoll intended to stage a sham fight with Communists alleged to be trying to cross the border, in order by this means to bring about the expulsion of Spanish emigrants in France just as the fascist police were also doing in France. Captain Cueto who, in spite of Fenoll's explanation, made public the true facts of the case, was expelled from the army and is now imprisoned in Oviedo.

It is possible that Macia was instigated by the agent provocateur Ricciotti Garibaldi. But Macia is a pure idealist of absolute integrity of character. He lacks a truly revolutionary conception of the proper means to conduct a fight against the military dictatorship.

On the other hand the Italian fascists are carrying on an active campaign in Spain in favour of an Italo-Spanish alliance against France. The secretary of the Italian fascists in Barcelona recently made a trip to Madrid in order to convince high personalities in that town of the necessity of such an alliance. The fascist deputy Gray, delivered a lecture in Barcelona in which he asserted that Spain and Italy will be the future sole powers of the Mediterranean. Another well-known Italian fascist, Stefano Molle, delivered a lecture in Madrid in favour of the Italo-Spanish alliance.

Macia's putsch bore a purely separatist character. In spite of this the government's Communiqué stated that the Communists were also involved in it. The Madrid police have arrested our most prominent leaders, including Comrades Vicente Arriaga and Antonio Mañueles, editor and administrator respectively of our organ "La Amorcha" (The Torch). Arrests of communists have also been carried out in other towns in Spain. Primo de Rivera wishes to implicate the Communists in the separatist putsch, in order to intimidate the democratic elements who are also conspiring against his government.

The failure of Macia's putsch will only strengthen the separatist movement in Catalonia. From now on Macia will be regarded as the hero of Catalonian independence, and the Catalan peasants will place implicit faith in him. But at the same time this failure will cause the separatists to realise that their movement for independence must be linked up with workers' struggles throughout all Spain against the dictatorship. In order to do this it does not suffice to organise the Spanish workers living in France. The organisation of the Spanish workers and peasants in Spain for the class struggle will result in the success of the efforts of the Catalonians for autonomy.

The Polish Monarchists and Pilsudski.
By T. Dobroński (Moscow).

One of the recent events, which caused great public excitement in Poland, was the conference of the aristocratic landed proprietors on the estate of Prince Radziwill at Nieświez and the participation at this meeting of Pilsudski, accompanied by his two monarchist Ministers, the landed proprietor Meissztowicz and Niezabitovszki.

Pilsudski visited Nieświez allegedly for the purpose of doing honour to the memory of Prince Stanislaw Radziwill, who was his adjutant in the fight against the Bolsheviks and was killed at Makita in 1920. But the toast proposed by Prince Eustachius Sapieha: "Long live Marshall Pilsudski!" proves that the conference was rather convoked in Pilsudski's honour. This is also proved by the circumstance that, after the banquet, the conference dealt with "objective questions". It was resolved to create a Conservative Agrarian Party uniting all landowners. The Press communications to the effect that Pilsudski has provided for a number of prominent nobles positions in the legations in the important countries and that the nobles have resolved to carry out a monarchist demonstration in the form of the transference of the remnants of the last King of Poland, Stanislaw Poniatowski, from Leningrad — all this goes to prove that this is not a question of insignificance, which the Press organ of Pilsudski "Glos Prawda" ("The Voice of Truth") represents it to be.

The Press, which represents the interests of Polish industry, and particularly the newspapers of the National Democrats, for the time being regard Pilsudski's participation in the above conference as a manoeuvre. The "Kurier Poznański" (Posen Courier) states:

"The strategy of Pilsudski and his political friends lies in disintegrating the national camp by bringing about the severance of some of the minor wings from the camp."

The National-Democratic Press consolos itself with the consideration that the Polish nobles cannot be regarded as the whole mass of the Polish landed proprietors; at the same time, however, it maintains that the national camp must anticipate a hard battle.

In addition, a short while ago there was a conference of Polish monarchists in Warsaw under the chairmanship of General Rzewski, which was dominated by the ideology of the "National-Christian Party". This is the party of the owners of medium-size and small estates lying chiefly in those districts of Poland which formerly belonged to Germany. The leaders of this party are Prof. Dubanowicz, a member of Parliament, and the editor of the "Warazawianka" (Stronghold). The conference laid down the principles of the "Monarchist Organisation". This makes the matter still more intelligible. When one also takes into consideration the efforts made to unite the monarchists with the group of the "Monarchist peasants" led by Deputy "Swiatkowski", it becomes clear that we are dealing with attempts to consolidate the monarchial movement in Poland.

The big farmers' party "Piast", with Wilosz at its head, has recently entertained thoughts of creating a Conservative Agrarian Party. The following was written by the editor-in-chief of the leading journal of the "Piast" Party, namely, Deputy Brodacki:

"It is high time for us to denounce old ways of error, to remove old divisions, for life and circumstances impose the necessity of a revision of the old programmes for the purpose of grouping society into a single anti-Bolshevist camp."

This statement is greeted most warmly by Swiatkowski, who remarks that it coincides exactly with the resolutions of his own party (the landowners).

It should not be left out of consideration that Pilsudski is putting into effect the policy of Anglo-American Capital, which is not only trying to make out of Fascist Poland a military outpost against the Soviet Union, but is also desirous of making Poland an agricultural country as a preliminary to converting Poland into a sales and raw material market. Under these circumstances, the efforts on the part of Pilsudski to subdue Polish agrarians, including the big farmers, have tremendous signifificance for future events in Poland. Whether the future will witness the proclamation of a monarchy and the election of Pilsudski as King of Poland (by no means an impossibility), or whether Pilsudski will remain the "uncrowned King" of Poland, are questions of secondary importance. The basic fact, and the most important one in any survey of the events which are now taking place in Poland, is that an intense consolidation of the reaction of the agrarians and of the corresponding Monarchist movement in the political sphere is in progress under an intimate understanding with Anglo-American Capital, with the object of carrying out, under the leadership of Pilsudski, the programme of converting Poland into an agricultural State.

These attempts will lead to an intensification of the fight between the Pilsudski clique and the camp of the industrialists represented by the National-Democratic Party. Without making any attempt to guess the outcome of this fight, one must expect its intensification in the near future. At the same time increased ferment must also be anticipated among the masses of the peasants, whose hopes built upon Pilsudski have been shattered.

The Struggles in Mexico.

By J. Wilenkin.

The present struggle between the Mexican Government and the Roman-Catholic Church is a continuation of the struggle waged by the working population of Mexico against the pressure exercised by the Church of Rome.

The Roman-Catholic Church is not merely a religious, but pre-eminently a political institution. On the European Continent the Church of Rome has its particular political party in almost every State and marshals the Catholic working-class in special organisations.

The United States of America have ever since their inception observed the strict separation of Church and State. Therefore the Catholic Church has there never undertaken any attempts towards the establishment of a particular political party or of special associations. Nevertheless, it has found means of influencing the labour movements by employing to this end the aid of the bureaucratic leaders of labour, many of whom are of the Roman-Catholic faith.

In Mexico the Catholic Church wielded an unrestricted power for a period of 300 years. It succeeded in concentrating in its own hands all the natural wealth of the country, the bulk of the gold and silver was sent to the Pope at Rome and to Spain. In this way the Catholic Church deprived the country of gold to the value of 27,000,000 dollars per annum; while of silver and other metals it exported in the course of three centuries no less than 3,000,000,000 dollars' worth. Until recently the Catholic Church owned huge estates, on which the Mexican agricultural labourers were exploited to an incredible degree. Apart from this, every farmer was obliged to render 10 per cent of his crops to the Church, added to which the latter had ample revenue on all possible occasions and under all possible pretexts.

According to the statements of the eminent American Catholic MacQuire (published in the New York periodical "Current History" in July 1926) the Catholic Church possessed in Mexico at the close of the eighteenth century a capital of 60,000,000 dollars, a sum then representing almost half the wealth of the country. These funds of the Church were invested mainly in extensive landed property on which the clergy exploited and oppressed the poor peasantry and rural workers. At the same time the Catholic Church carried on usury, advancing money on interest to peasants and the petty bourgeoisie. In this way the peasantry and the petty bourgeoisie were completely subjugated in an economic sense. The political power too, was in the hands of the Catholic Church.

The Church, moreover, which had education entirely in its own hands, did nothing for the cultural development of the indigenous town and country population. On the contrary, it endeavoured to leave the whole population, with the exception of the landed aristocracy, in the grossest ignorance, finding only very few elementary schools. Almost 90 per cent of the inhabitants of the country were unable to read or write. Now 28 million

This economic, political, and cultural subjugation of the working population by the Catholic Church aroused indignation throughout the country and led, in the year 1857, to the overthrow of the Church rule and the creation of the Mexican Constitution. Parallel with the effectuation of reforms in Mexico in 1859 the secular power of the Church of Rome was abolished, whereby its economic importance was likewise weakened; at the same time an end was put to the bondsmen and political power of the landed aristocracy.

The overthrow of the landed aristocracy and of the Catholic Church marked the commencement of the development of capitalism in Mexico.

It was by foreign capital that this development was both initiated and carried out. Once such capital had penetrated into the country, the transport problem, which had up to that time presented substantial difficulties, was speedily solved within quite a short space of time. Railways had been laid over a stretch of 10,000 miles.

The extraction of the mineral wealth of the soil made prodigious strides; thus in 1880 only 21,000,000 ounces of silver had been mined, while in 1910 the output exceeded 74,000,000 ounces; in the same space of time the gold output rose from 44,000 to 1,000,000 ounces. The production of copper figured at 4,000 tons in 1890 and at 50,000 in 1910. The lead output, too, rose enormously during this period, increasing from 21,000 to 133,000 tons. In 1903, moreover, extensive naphtha springs were discovered.

It is mainly four Powers, the United States, Great Britain, France, and Germany, that have striven to gain the natural wealth of Mexico.

When capitalism first started developing in Mexico it was British capital that played the chief role and was, moreover, preferred by President Diaz. However, when the capitalism of the United States had attained a certain degree of development, it started to seek the bourgeoisie of other countries from the Mexican market, in order to turn to them for help. According to data supplied by Andrew Barlow, United States Minister to Mexico, the year 1902 saw American capitalists participating in various enterprises in Mexico to an aggregate extent of 500,000,000 dollars. By the year 1907 American capital investments had risen to a total of 750,000,000 dollars; in that year 80 per cent of all capital invested in Mexican railways was in the hands of United States enterprises.

The position in 1911, as represented by the "Annals," showed the United States capital invested in Mexico to total 1,000,000,000 dollars.

According to the report of Detacherian, American Consul in Mexico, United States employers had, in 1912, 1,054,770,000 dollars invested in various branches of industry, thus ousting British capital from its leading position since the latter was transferred only to a total of 32,301,000 dollars in Mexican concerns. If we take into account that in 1912 the entire national wealth of Mexico figured at 2,494,241,422 dollars, American capitalists may be said to own practically the half of it.

The giant American concerns and financial magnates, such as Rockefeller, Morgan, Guggenheim, and Schiff, are in the very closest connection with the big Mexican enterprises.

Together with the growth of capitalism in Mexico, the economic power of the Catholic Church again increased owing to the fault of President Diaz, who had taken no pains to carry out the measures resolved against the position of the Church.

The competition between the United States and Great Britain extends particularly to the crude oil industry. According to returns published by Moody's Statistical Bureau on March 10th, 1923, a total of 1,050,532,434 dollars was at that time invested in the crude oil enterprises of Mexico. Of this total 600,000,000 dollars or 57 per cent were concentrated in the hands of the United States oil kings. The share falling to British capital was 354,770,000 dollars or 33 per cent.

When, in 1911, a Mexican revolution headed by Madero broke out against the Diaz Government, the American imperialists openly sided with the revolutionaries, who were then fighting for the expropriation of the Church and the landed aristocracy. Seeing that the United States imperialists were determined at all costs to destroy the political influence of Great Britain in Mexico, Diaz, the adherent of Great Britain, had necessarily to be deposed.

The United States succeeded in frustrating the influence of Great Britain but only at the cost of seeing their own authority shaken as well, for the working masses fought not only against the Church and the landed aristocracy but also against capitalist exploitation in the factories and mines.

In the years following the overthrow of the Church rule and the creation of the Mexican Constitution, the struggle continued between workers and farmers on the one hand and the various politicians bribed by Great Britain or the United States on the other.

The United States intrigued against Great Britain, exploited the labour unrest for their own ends, and often tried to provoke artificial revolts in Mexico with a view to strengthening their own influence there. For a short while, indeed, they succeeded in subduing the country and plundering its rich resources.

The fall of President Diaz, however, and the advent of a new regime headed by Madero, did not bring the Mexican peasant the realisation of their demands for expropriation of the Catholic Church and the landed aristocracy in favour of the peasants. For various reasons Madero did not venture to carry out the reforms he had promised, primarily actuated by the fact that any such policy would have harmed the interests of the American, British, and other imperialists, who had got the naphtha springs and other mineral wealth of the country into their hands.

The refusal of the Government to parcel out the land aroused peasant revolts throughout the country. A series of Presidents were deposed, while the United States and Great Britain endeavoured to exploit these peasant revolts to serve their own ends. (1916 concluded.)

The Economic Condition of Spain under the Military Dictatorship

By J. A. (Madrid) (Continued from page 19)

The co-operation of the Socialists with the government of Primo de Rivera and the persecution of the Communists have given the Spanish military dictatorship a certain degree of international political peace. Nevertheless economic conditions are becoming more serious every day.

Although Spain did not participate in the world war, Spanish society is in such a critical condition that this may easily bring about the fall of the present government, at any moment.

The total national debt of Spain amounted to 17,000,427,754

Pesetas. Of this sum the State has consolidated 12,283,549,254

Pesetas and the remainder, 2,726,478,500 Pesetas represents pesetas and the remainder, 2,726,478,500 Pesetas.

These bonds issued under the Directory. These bonds become due for redemption on the following dates: 1939, 1940, 1941,

February 4, 1942; 700 million on April 13, 1943; 275 million on November 4, 1945; 1,255 million on January 1, 1949, and 1,500 million on July 1, 1950.

Spain incurred these debts in the Moroccan war. In this colonial adventure Spain spent huge figures, 900 million

Pesetas 2 years which is about equal to the amount of her annual expenditure last year in the Moroccan war was 377,000,000 Pesetas. 17% of the State budget is swallowed up in military expenditure. Since 1909 the Moroccan war has cost Spain 6,000 million Pesetas. The revenue from the Spanish Protektorate zone amounted in the same period to 14,107,500 Pesetas.

The Spanish budget (which has not been revised since 1920) came into power amounts to 3,671,458,230 Pesetas.

Of this sum 600 million have to be paid out as interest, while 900 million is absorbed by the Moroccan war. Thus there only

1,200 million Pesetas of which one-half is allotted to remain 1,200 million Pesetas of which one-half is allotted to the army and navy leaving over 600 million for all other purposes. This is a very serious situation in spite of the fact that Spain was not involved in the world war, 30% of the annual budget is devoted to the payment of interest and since

Primo de Riveras coup d'etat the debt has increased by 5,000 million Pesetas.

In addition to this it is exceedingly likely that the direction of Spanish finance is to increase the amount of 600 million pesetas.

Thus the position as regards trade is very serious. The number of bankruptcies is very great. It is very difficult to give exact figures regarding these because the Directory purposely delays the publication of statistics. The banks are greatly restricting credits.

At the same time the colonisation of Spain by foreign capital is still going on. The English groups possess the largest number of undertakings. The latest Spanish supplement of the "Internation" showed the extent of this colonisation by British capital.

King Alfonso is participating in this business with foreign capitalists and his financial speculations at home have for the greater part been a failure. Prince Fernando of Bavaria a relative of the monarch is representing a British group interested in railway construction.

Thus the financial and economic difficulties are growing and are thereby more and more undermining the foundations of the dictatorship in Spain.

greater than indicated above and the expenditure on public works and education correspondingly less, so in those years. At the beginning of the current year the state finances were in such a critical condition that the State's account with the Banco de Espana stood at nil. In order to be able to meet its immediate liabilities the State made use of its right to borrow up to the limit of 300 million from the Banco de Espana without interest. This is a state of affairs unprecedented in Spain since the restoration of the Bourbons in 1874.

Industrial and government securities are falling every day.

This is to be seen from the following table:

	January 1925	January 1926
Government securities	100	98.20
Municipal bonds	100	99.5
Banking companies	100	95.40
Electric Companies	100	90.40
Mines	100	73.50
Transport	100	88.24
Manufacturing firms	100	84.88
Shipping	100	87.32

Before the coup d'etat the dollar stood at 64.6 Pesetas. In 1923 the Directorio the dollar has reached 84.17 Pesetas. In 1925 the Rivera dictatorship has mounted to 94.08 Pesetas.

The industrial crisis is very serious. As there has no stimulus as to employment there remains in 1926 the exact number of unemployed. Primo de Rivera imagines that he has succeeded in stabilising social order, because since his coup d'etat, very few strikes have been officially recorded (August 1923 320 strikes; August 1926 12 strikes). But he makes no mention of unemployment, which is a matter of fact.

The cost of living is also increasing. The index figures for June, July and August 1926 are as follows:

June 100 July 100 August 100

Food and drink 100 100 100

U.S.S.R. 1930

After receiving the report of Comrade Kirow on the 15th Conference of the C.P.S.U., the body of functionaries of the Leningrad party organisation has unanimously adopted the resolutions.

Contrary to all the prophecies of the Opposition Bloc, the favourable harvests and the considerable increase of production in industry on the one hand, and on the other hand a number of measures taken by the party have led to our entering on the new economic year under far more stable conditions than in last autumn.

The course towards industrialisation which has been consistently followed by the Party has already borne fruit and is taking effect in the increasing importance of the socialist elements of our economy, both in production and in the turnover of goods, and also in the distribution of the national income.

The general growth of our economy as well as the new tasks of construction by which we are faced call for an appropriate testing of the system of economic management and administration.

The improvement of our apparatus of economic and administration should above all be directed towards reducing expenses. One of our most urgent tasks is to strive to introduce a regime of economy — above all and chiefly in trade.

The functionaries of the Leningrad organisation note with special satisfaction the complete bankruptcy of the Opposition Bloc at the 15th Conference. Its representatives did not utter a single word with regard to the questions of economics and of trade unions and to international questions, for all the suggestions of the Opposition, both relating to prices and to wages or to the policy of taxation, demonstrated their complete nullity and worthlessness and were exposed by the party members — the workers of Leningrad and Moscow. In the same way it became evident that all the assertions of the Opposition at the last Plenary Meeting of the C.C. in respect to international questions were without foundation. Assertions to the effect that the Leninist tactics of a united front should be completely abandoned and replaced by hollow ultra-left phrases.

The body of functionaries of the Leningrad organisation agrees with the Conference's description of the Opposition Bloc as a social democratic deviation within our party. Not a single one of the Opposition leaders who spoke was able to disprove the almost complete conformity between the views of so inventively a social democrat as Otto Bauer and those of Comrade Trotsky, the spiritual leader of the Opposition Bloc with regard to the peasantry and to the possibility of socialist construction in our country.

The functionaries of the Leningrad organisation call attention to the fact that in describing the ideological attitude of the present Opposition Bloc as a social democratic deviation, the 15th Party Conference is merely defining more precisely the characterisation of Trotskyism as a petty bourgeois deviation which was given by Comrade Zinoviev at the 13th Party Conference. Such an exact definition is all the more necessary since the Opposition has undertaken to revise Leninism with regard to one of the most important cardinal questions. Referring to the question of the possibility of victory for socialism in our country.

The crushing repulse which the Opposition met with from the whole party — but especially from the Bolshevik workers of Moscow and Leningrad — forced the Opposition leaders at the 15th Party Conference to admit that the fractional work they had carried out was harmful and inadmissible and to promise to abandon it in future. The party, and especially the Leningrad organisation, however, is not inclined to take words for deeds. The statement of the Opposition as to their willingness to give up fractional activity must be proved by deeds.

More than 4000 comrades attended the meeting.

The Opposition must resolutely put an end to all fractional activity both in the party and in the Comintern. The Opposition must abandon its anti-Leninist Trotskyist estimation of the driving forces of the revolution, its estimation of the part played by the peasantry and its lack of faith in the possibility of the construction and in the real existence of the construction of socialism in our country. The Opposition must revoke its assertion that the Soviet State is undergoing a bureaucratic degeneration — an assertion which is quite imbued with the social democratic attitude. The Opposition must discontinue its attacks on the party apparatus which are inadmissible in a Bolshevik party and which practically amount to an attack on the unity and discipline of the party. The Opposition must abandon the Menshevik practice of throwing demagogic slogans to the non-party masses over the head of the party and their attempts to speculate on the objective difficulties of our construction.

In view of the fact that the Opposition leaders did not renounce a single one of their fundamental theses at the Conference, the body of functionaries of the Leningrad organisation considers it absolutely essential to continue the ideological fight against the social democratic deviation of the Opposition Bloc.

It is further necessary to continue in the future the campaign for the final unmasking of the capitulationism of the Opposition Bloc and its essentially Trotskyist character.

The functionaries of the Leningrad organisation state with great satisfaction that the 15th Party Conference emphasised and reinforced the firmly-welded, unalterable loyalty of the party cadres in its Leninist positions and at the same time created a situation in which all forces can be directed towards positive work towards the great work of the construction of socialism.

The Leningrad organisation will continue in future to be a firm support to the Leninist C.C. and will relentlessly oppose all attempts to undermine the unity of the party and the work of socialist construction from whatever side they may come.

Long live the C.P.S.U. and its Central Committee!

(Passed unanimously on November 9th.)

IN THE INTERNATIONAL

Declaration of the Communist Parties of France and Spain with Regard to the Catalonian Movement

The attempt of Colonel Macia and his adherents, a simple episode in the fight which is being carried on by the Catalonian people in order to gain their independence, has prompted the Communist party of France and the Communist party of Spain to formulate clearly their policy with regard to this question.

The Communist parties of France and Spain point out that the Communist International supports every oppressed nation which is anxious to free itself from the yoke of an imperialist power. Yesterday our two parties in common supported the small people of the Riffs; to-day as yesterday the Communist party of France is supporting Alsace-Lorraine in its fight against the oppression of French imperialism; to-morrow it will be prepared to support any colony which wants to shake off the rule of French imperialism.

For this reason we say with all emphasis that the fight of the Catalonian people for its independence is being supported by the Communist International and especially by its sections in France and Spain and, under the present circumstances, we shall support this fight all the more because it is directed against the fascist dictatorship of Primo de Rivera.

We would reiterate with special emphasis that experiments at new frontiers will no more free Catalonia from the oppression of Spain than "frontier agreements" (military pacts) will free Spain from Primo de Rivera. Only a great mass-movement of the oppressed people of Catalonia will ensure them their independence.

In this respect we stigmatise the large Press of France which is endeavouring to conceal from its readers the true situation and the unanimous will to freedom of the Catalonian people and which, by picturesque descriptions is degrading this national fight into an adventurous undertaking of a few distinguished persons who are deceived by decoy agents.

We further pillory the Government of France which has manifested its co-operation with the dictator of Spain by having Macia and his comrades arrested and which is attempting to make use of this occasion in order to approach nearer to Spain and to isolate the immediate rival of France in the Mediterranean — Italian imperialism.

We remind the workers of Catalonia, Spain and France that like all oppressed peoples, Catalonia will only work out its liberation, if it unites its movement for national independence with the fight of the proletariat of Spain and of the proletariat of all countries to defeat capitalism.

Manifesto of the C.C. of the Communist Parties of France and Italy.

For the Common Fight against the French Bourgeoisie and against Italian Fascism.

Serious friction — as we anticipated — has now arisen between France and Italy. Just as in the dark days which preceded the outbreak of the world war, the chauvinists of both countries are let loose. In Italy French workmen are being molested by Fascist bands and the extraterritorial rights of the consulates are being disregarded. In France, the Press is using every means in its power to arouse chauvinistic feeling. In short, the difficulties which France and Italy have been making for one another since the termination of the war have now led to a climax. The spectre of a bloody conflict between these two big Capitalist States of Europe has again appeared.

The causes of the continuous ill-feeling, which has existed between France and Italy since the end of the war and which has just developed into a violent crisis, must be sought in the following circumstances: in the "solutions" which the world war provided for the crisis of Capitalism, in the division of the world by the treaties of Versailles, etc., in the post-war economic crisis and in the economic measures taken in the various States with the object of removing this crisis, in the methods used to achieve stabilisation, in the nationalisation of the means of production, in the formation of rings and trusts and in the contradictions thereby created.

Italy emerged from the war disappointed and badly rewarded. Great Britain and France divided between themselves the colonies of the defeated countries. Driven on by surplus population, which compels half a million Italians to emigrate every year, driven on by a floundering industry which must pay heavy tribute to other countries for raw materials and which was greatly extended during the course of the war, Italy plunged headlong into a policy of colonial expansion.

Without interruption, Italy demands settlement colonies, fresh sales markets and new sources of raw materials. It finds itself overlooking districts colonised by France and containing abundant raw material, which France already has in its home territory, while the population of immigrants from France is in some districts outnumbered by the immigrants from Italy (Tunis). Italy sees how Imperialist France increases its colonial territory and makes attacks upon the Riff tribes and the Syrians in order to strengthen its dominion in the colonies and in the whole of the Mediterranean region. It finds other Imperialist powers, who are disquieted by this colonial and Mediterranean supremacy of France and secretly oppose it. Italy is supported by these Imperialist powers. It is Great Britain which supports Italy's policy for the division of Abyssinia, a policy which clashes with French imperialism, which has already secured for itself a place in that country. It is Spain which, discontented with the lot that the Imperialism of France has prepared for it in Morocco, conspires with the Imperialism of Italy to change the equilibrium of the Mediterranean region.

And Italy persists systematically in its fight in the Balkans with a view to ouplanting French imperialism, which was supreme there after the war. In this way Italy has succeeded in a number of countries, notably Yugoslavia and Roumania, in winning sympathy. It is not by supporting the fight of French Imperialism against Italian Imperialism that the workers of France and peralism, which holds millions of slaves under its yoke and the other Imperialism which, for its part, desires to possess colonies.

The economic rise of the European countries has aggravated this fight for sales markets and sources of raw materials.

The latest industrial combinations: the steel trust and the efforts towards a rapprochement between France and Germany, which followed closely upon one another, immediately threatened the Imperialist policy of Italy. Industry in Italy is, on account of the economic crisis in Great Britain, compelled to pay tribute to the steel trust of France and Germany. German Imperialism, which has just appeared again on the political scene in Europe, is becoming an effective competitor in the fight for colonies.

Finally, Fascism, which stirred up in an extreme measure the Nationalism of the social classes which adhere to its party and awoke hopes of expansion, is no longer able to control the elements which it let loose. The anti-French demonstrations which have taken place within the last few weeks in Italy are, at the same time, the result of the rivalry between the Imperialism of Italy and that of France, as also of the provocative policy of Fascism.

A serious crisis is now shaking Fascism. The last attempt to assassinate Mussolini was not organised by anti-Fascist elements but was hatched within the ranks of Fascism itself. At present the leaders of Italian Fascism are compelled to recognise that they must fight energetically in their own ranks to maintain their supremacy. In order to disguise the gravity of this crisis, the Fascist leaders are trying all kinds of manoeuvres, both of domestic policy and of foreign political nature, to distract attention.

The Imperialism of France, for its part, profits by all these circumstances to hit blows at Italian imperialism. The so-called Democratic Press exploits the animosity of the proletarian masses against the bloody dictatorship of Rome for the purpose of stirring up Nationalist feeling, in a manner worthy of anti-Fascist newspapers. By exploiting recent incidents, for example, the Catalan adventure, in which Italian provocateurs are said to have taken part, it endeavours to destroy the alliance between Italy and Spain for the benefit of French imperialism. The sensational disclosures and the commentaries which are appended to them and only mildly denied by the Government, prove that French Imperialism wishes to restore, by means of propaganda against Mussolini and against Fascism, the co-operation between France and Great Britain and the former alliance with Spain, in order to change once more the distribution of power in the Mediterranean. In reality, the anti-Fascist campaign disguises quite as badly the intentions of French Imperialism as do the provocations of Fascism the intentions of the Italian Imperialism.

The workers of France and Italy should not allow themselves to be led astray by these demonstrations. Yesterday, the Government of France took measures against Italian revolutionaries to prevent them from preparing themselves for the fight against the dictatorship of Imperialism which it to-day stigmatises. Its Nationalist and Democratic Press agreed with the Government without reserve. The Communists alone protested against these measures taken at the request of Mussolini. The Government also prohibited the anti-Fascist demonstrations. It arrested Catalan revolutionaries who were proceeding to fight against the Spanish Fascist, Primo de Rivera, who oppresses the people of Catalonia. These various demonstrations prove that French Imperialism plays with "anti-Fascism" or protects Fascism just as suits its interests.

The workers of France and Italy will not let themselves be deluded by the action of French Social-Patriotism, which is preparing the way for the Government of the National Union and lauds to the skies "the force of the blow" which the Government has dealt to Italian imperialism, while making no mention of the significance of the support which the Government renders to the Fascism of Spain nor of the ulterior motives of the dispute. Certain Social-Patriots, who go even further than the Government clique, urge the latter to take energetic measures against Italy. In this way they set themselves at the head of the chauvinistic movement of the country. Social-chauvinism and the so-called Democratic parties threaten the toilers of both countries.

It is not by supporting the fight of French Imperialism against Italian Imperialism that the workers of France and Italy will free themselves from Fascism and from the French bourgeoisie, but only by means of a common fight directed at the same time against both the French bourgeoisie and Fascism.

The workers of France must fight against all measures which might weaken the fight of the Italian proletariat against Fascism. They must demand the annulment of all emergency laws directed against foreign workers and especially against the Italian workers.

They must use all their resources and all their means to support the heroic fight of the Italian proletariat against their Government.

They must consistently help their brothers in the colonies in their fight for independence and energetically oppose every policy of colonial expansion.

Long live the international fight of the proletarians of France and Italy!

Down with the Imperialist activity of the Governments of France and Italy!

A good relation existed between the Y.C.I. and the Comintern. There was good activity on the part of the communists south in Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China. The relative stabilisation and the rationalisation created new tasks. This present period however was not one of social peace. Strategic tasks now being developed.

An appeal of the R.I.L.U. against fascist terror in Italy reads as follows:

The Executive Bureau of the R.I.L.U. appeals to all workers, men and women, to undertake a systematic protest campaign against the rule of bloodshed and of provocation as well as against fascist dictatorship. An end must be put to the annihilation of the best representatives of the working masses of Italy and to the scorning of the Italian people by fascist gangs.

The Italian Amsterdamers, who always adapted themselves to the fascist rule and refused to lead the struggle against fascist dictatorship together with the communists and the revolutionary workers, are now also forced into illegality. They were utilised by the fascists for the struggle against the revolutionary wing of the labour movement and now, their dirty work being done, they are kicked away by the fascists. Thus Italian reformism, which had facilitated the conquest of power by the fascists and their dictatorship, prepared itself the ground for the persecutions which have led to the disbandment and destruction of even the reformist organisations.

For the Italian working class there is no other way out than the overthrow of this bloody dictatorship, than the revolutionary struggle against fascist reaction, which is supported by the Italian bourgeoisie. In Italy as well as outside it there are at present only two camps: for and against fascist reaction, for and against fascist dictatorship. Who is not against fascism, is in favour of it. This is the question; it can be put in no other way.

May the voice of protest against the suppression and scorning of the working masses in Italy, against the destruction of the labour organisations by fascist gangs be raised in every town, in every factory, wherever a proletarian heart is beating.

Down with the rule of blood and provocation! Down with fascist dictatorship! Long live the united front against fascism!

ENLARGED E.C. OF THE Y.C.I.

Sixth Session of the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Young Communist International

(Telegraphic Reports)

Moscow, 13th November 1926

Opening Session

The sixth enlarged executive session of the E.C. of the Y.C.I. was opened by comrade Gyptner. Gyptner pointed out that the opening of the enlarged executive session of the Y.C.I. before that of the Comintern did not mean any alienation from the Comintern. On the contrary greater participation in the work of the Comintern had paid the Young Communist International great attention.

The session would deal with the discussion upon the tactics of the Comintern. The Y.C.I. was unanimously in favour of the policy of the Comintern and of the C.P. of the U.S.S.R.

This session was faced with practical questions, in particular questions relating to organisation and to the opponents of the Y.C.I. and the E.C. of the Comintern.

The chairman then greeted the delegation of the Comintern consisting of comrades Moshulski, Smeral, Remmelt, Murphy and Cremet.

Comrade Smeral greeted the session in the name of the E.C.C. In the good results of the work of the Comintern were gratifying, he declared. The membership had grown.

The leftward development of the working masses was proceeding: the general strike in Great Britain, the growth of the minority movement, the communist Party and the Young Communist League in Great Britain, and in Germany the movement for the confiscation of the property of the princes, the Hamburg dockers' strike, the elections in Saxony, the breaking up of the social democracy, in France the disillusionment with the left bloc, the 24 hour general strike for the British miners, in Poland the victory of the communists in the elections despite the terror. In general there was a strong development to the left.

The social basis of the opposition in the U.S.S.R. was first of all the economic difficulties which have already been partly overcome, and secondly, an absolute growth of private capital and thus an increasing pressure on the part of the bourgeoisie. The opposition represented a social democratic deviation. Proof of this was contained in the following four points: 1. its attitude to the economic structure and to the Soviet State; 2. its estimation of our prospects; 3. our relations to the peasantry and 4. the problems of the internal party life. The complete defeat of the opposition was followed by the voluntary capitulation. The capitulation meant the abandonment of the struggle. The party, however, would have to continue the struggle for ideological clarity.

The final victory of socialism was not possible in the Soviet Union alone. The building up of socialism was possible despite the capitalist environment of the Soviet Union but of course it would proceed more slowly. This building up of socialism was of tremendous importance for the world proletariat.

Various groups in the German opposition were united by a common hatred of the Soviet Union and the C.P. of the Soviet Union. Insane petty bourgeois and the support of sections of the unemployed formed the basis of these groups. In the German question they had no platform and were therefore all the more eager to open up a discussion upon questions concerning the Soviet Union. There were two chief tendencies in this opposition, first of all that of Korsch and Schwarz, which went farther than Kautsky and stood for a "second revolution" and the splitting of the German and Russian Communist Parties. Secondly, that of Urbanna and Weber which characterised itself by slandering the Soviet Union and spreading lies. The strong fractional activity was not seeking for a split now, but at a more favourable time for the opposition. The prospects for the German party were good. A short while ago Ruth Fischer and Maslow were leading the party. Now they were completely defeated. The expulsions which had been carried out were correct and perhaps still further expulsions would be necessary. Practical experience would show the final liquidation of the Ultraleft.

In France there existed two groups: Sosaraine supported the opposition in the C.P. of the U.S.S.R. The group Jacob-Girault had no clear platform and criticised the errors of the party in French questions. The party had, however, itself criticised these errors. In questions related to the Soviet Union this group was very careful.

In Czechoslovakia there was the group around the Brno Memorandum in favour of Trotsky. Nearami was practically in block with this group.

In Great Britain the party had adopted a correct policy during the general strike and during the struggle of the miners. The chief task was the exposure of the leaders. The leaders were going to the right, the masses to the left. Coal is in favour of lighting, but vacillating. The Communist Party of Great Britain had also made mistakes but these would be easy to rectify.

The significance and the importance of the events in China was clear. The question of the composition of the Kuomintang Party was of great importance. The peasants would have to be drawn into the revolutionary movement. The hegemony of the proletariat is necessary and the Communist Party would have to become the leader of the revolution.

The mistakes committed by the Polish party in May had already been exposed. The chief danger in the Polish party came from the Right, but there was also a danger from the Left.

In Norway the Right wing of the party had a tendency towards amalgamation with the social democrats. In Greece the party and the youth made various mistakes during the time of the recent disturbances. In Bulgaria a wrong opinion existed amongst various comrades in relation to the question of a Left bourgeois government. These mistakes had already been repaired.

The coming session of the Enlarged Executive of the Comintern would be faced with two questions: 1. the question of the removal of Comrade Zinoviev and the organisation of the leadership of the Comintern; 2. the reorganisation of the apparatus. The foreign comrades must take a greater part of the work.

A partial stabilisation existed but the prospects of the world revolution were good. The attempts to carry the stabilisation further would bring an intensification of the class struggle. The chief task was to win the masses in the struggle by connecting the partial demands with the final aim. It would be possible, declared the speaker, in this way to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat at the next wave of the revolution. (Applause.)

Third Session (November 13th, 1926)

Comrade MICHALEC:

The declaration of the opposition in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union of the 16th of October is an appeal to all sympathising oppositions in other parties to do the same. I do not hold this declaration to be binding for me. From this follows my attitude to the expected. There is now a new course in the Comintern. There has been a deviation of the Comintern to the Right. The Comintern must return to the left.

The following points are characteristic of the international situation: First of all the decisive sign of the period of decay. Secondly the question of the united front tactic and the struggle for unity. Thirdly the struggle against the Right and Left deviations. The Right deviations must receive special attention. Fourthly, the internal party democracy.

The more decisive danger is now the Right danger which shows itself in the following four points: First of all the estimation of the present situation, secondly, in the question of tactics, particularly with regard to the Anglo-Russian Committee, thirdly in the struggle against the Right and Left deviations, here the greatest attention must be directed against the Right and fourthly the questions of internal party democracy. The opposition must not be fought, it must be educated.

A representative of the Y.C.I. of Germany:

Comrade Michalec has a peculiar method of discussion. He reads a prepared speech, makes no reply to interruptions and takes contention without attempting to prove them.

My opinion is clear. The estimation of the Right and Left dangers by the opposition is incorrect. The Right dangers are not always in the foreground in the Communist Parties. This depends upon the given situation. Today there are Right mistakes, but the Ultraleft mistakes are much greater. This is particularly true of the German C.P. The Rights in the German C.P. are defeated, the Ultralefts had influence for instance in Berlin. Now, however, the Ultralefts are also defeated and are losing their influence. The German opposition is an ideological hanger-on of the opposition in the Soviet Union. Now that the opposition in the Soviet Union has fallen, the opposition in Germany will also fall. The C.P. and the Y.C.I. of Germany are convinced in their tremendous majority of the incorrectness of the standpoint of the opposition. The arguments of Comrade Michalec have convinced no one. The overwhelming majority of our League is against him. (Applause.)

In France there existed two groups: Sosaraine supported the opposition in the C.P. of the U.S.S.R. The group Jacob-Girault had no clear platform and criticised the errors of the party in French questions. The party had, however, itself criticised these errors. Since the 16th of October we have not heard such attacks. Comrade Michalec has gone further than the opposition in the C.P. of the Soviet Union. He has falsified quotations from Lenin and Stalin.
